

LET'S GROW THE GAME AND LEAVE A LEGACY

It's easy and adds benefit to your tax planning.

JEAN STONE-SEGUIN is a true promoter of the game. "I didn't really start playing golf seriously until I joined Camelot about twenty-five years ago. One of the reasons for getting involved with the Rules of Golf was because I knew I would never become a golfer of any distinction, but I immediately fell in love with the game and wanted to give back.

Jean is a nationally certified referee among a multitude of other volunteer positions; count them: Past President of the Ottawa Golf Association, Past President of Camelot Golf and Country Club, Golf Québec's Rules Committee, and past Board Director at Ronald McDonald House in Ottawa. Jean then joined Golf Canada's Board of Directors in 2019 and currently serves as the Chair of the Governors' Council and has chosen to leave a legacy gift in her will to support Golf Canada programs that help grow the game in Canada.

Volunteering for Golf Canada has enriched my life for many years and in so many ways. Junior golf, course rating and handicapping, rules and even professional events have led me to want to give back to grow the game. A game that teaches significant life lessons—honesty, integrity and interpersonal skills that allow all those who participate in this wonderful sport to succeed in their future personal and professional endeavours. I decided to leave some money in my will to the Golf Canada Foundation because it was the easiest way for me to give a meaningful gift, while having a direct impact on growing the game in Canada.

Are you as passionate as Jean about the game you love? By leaving a bequest now, you can ensure a direct impact on growing the program(s) of your choice; be it grassroots junior programming that introduce kids to the game, heritage, women initiatives, collegiate support, or helping high-performance team climb leaderboards around the world.
